

A Letter To High School T&F Athletes About Race Walking In College

By Vince Peters, USATF National Chairman of Race Walking (December, 2010)

High School track and field athletes in general and high school race walkers in particular, need to be made aware that there is a shortage of race walkers in the USA. There are currently more colleges needing race walkers for their Track & Field teams than there are HS walkers in the USA. As a result, some colleges are now recruiting race walkers from other countries to walk here in the USA. This fact is presented only to stress the point that high school race walkers are an important commodity to many colleges.

What does it take to be a collegiate walker? The current qualifying times for the collegiate nationals in the race walk are illustrated in the table below. Looks pretty easy? Well only 25 men and 15 women qualified to compete at the outdoor nationals in St. Louis, Missouri, last spring. So it is challenging. Especially for those young men and women just taking up this track & field event at the collegiate level:

RW Qualifying Standards For 2011 Collegiate T&F Nationals
Race Distance	Men		Women
	Automatic	Provisional	Automatic	Provisional
INDOORS: 3,000 meters for men & women	15:00.00	16:10.00	17:59.00	18:50.00
OUTDOORS: 5,000m for men & women	25:59.00	26:30.00	28:15.00	29:45.00

There are scholarships available for aspiring high school athletes who are experienced race walkers. Not many, 5 to 10 per year, but they exist. They are not easy to find, nor given out to just anybody.

But what colleges have the race walk? It isn't easy for a high school athlete to find out. But look at it from a college coach's point of view. Many media outlets don't print results of any HS competition anymore, much less the results of a race walk competition. Why, because in their eyes it isn't a high school event. Thankfully this is something the National Federation of State High School Associations (NFHS) and USA Track & Field (USATF) is working on. But until then, many college coaches don't know where to look to find that walker that can score points for their teams. The point of this article is to help those college coaches and prospective athletes connect.

Searching the Internet:

When a high school student-athlete starts the search for their future college the first thing that young man or woman should do is to create a list of institutions that offer the area(s) of study he, or she, is interested in. This is the most important thing to do. After all, you go to college to get a good education. Athletics, including race walking, should be secondary.

There are many web sites on the internet that can help search the 2,500 or so colleges and universities in the USA for the ones that have the course of study desired. They can be found by going to any of the popular search engines like yahoo.com and google.com and typing in "College Search" and clicking on the SEARCH button.

Two good web sites that can help with this are:

- ❑ Find a College - College Search - Majors and Careers – <http://www.collegeboard.com/csearch/>
- ❑ USNews.com: America's Best Colleges 2010: Custom College Finder – <http://colleges.usnews.rankingsandreviews.com/college>

The list returned by these searches can then be refined by limiting the search parameters by the size, location, distance, price, and type of college.

But before eliminating any schools, student-athletes may want to create a sub-list of all schools that have both the degree program sought and are athletically compatible - which means a school that offers race walking. This second step requires a great deal more time and effort. This article should help the athlete accomplish this task.

Some background information on scholarships:

Every athlete is interested in getting a scholarship to college. So it may come as a shock, but in today's collegiate environment rarely does any student-athlete receive a "Full Ride" or scholarship to college. "Quarter" and "Third" scholarships are more the norm in athletics. These are often divided along the lines of separate awards for tuition, board, and books. An athlete may receive one, or two, but rarely all three. Financial need and academic standing are also determining factors.

Further complicating the recruiting situation is the window afforded individual colleges for making contact with potential student athletes. Four sets of governing rules are in effect. The rules vary between the three divisions within the National Collegiate Athletics Association (NCAA). Plus the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) has its own set.

Generally, college coaches can't talk about recruiting and scholarship commitments until the athlete's senior year in high school. But during the junior year a high school student can initiate communication with a college by filling out one of the on-line forms that most college & university athletic departments offer on their web sites. Optionally, you can email a coach directly and request information about their college and track and cross country programs.

One last, very important consideration when seeking that athletics scholarship – there is more money available via academic scholarships for good grades and test scores than for athletic prowess. So while you are focusing on that set of 20 fast 400 meter repeats in practice, remember it is even more important to be getting top notch marks in the class room.

More on Obtaining College Financial Aid:

The typical first step in getting financial aid is completing the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). This document provides guidelines to how much financial aid the student-athlete is eligible for outside of any (athletic or academic) merit based scholarships. This is obtained at: www.fafsa.ed.gov

Most colleges require this before awarding any merit based scholarships or need-based grants and loans. This includes the Pell grants and the Perkins and Stafford loan programs.

You should also check into the special interest and regional scholarships that are available at the colleges you have narrowed your choices down too. And don't forget there is also a Federal Department of Education searchable database. This data base can provide additional places to apply for scholarships: <https://studentaid2.ed.gov/getmoney/scholarship/v3browse.asp>

Finally, don't forget to consult with the counselors at your high school and the admissions advisors at the colleges you are considering. They have additional resources available to them for assisting you – particularly in answering any questions about information concerning the programs mentioned in this document.

WHAT COLLEGES ARE LOOKING FOR RACE WALKERS?

The National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) has been conducting the race walk as a scored event at its National Track & Field Championships for over 35 years. Since 1980 nearly 75% of all race walkers on the USA Olympic Team have graduated from NAIA member colleges and universities.

The NAIA has always been the forward thinking, driving force for the inclusion, not exclusion, of all Olympic Events at the collegiate level. Not only are the race walks a scoring event at both the indoor and outdoor National T&F Championships but the NAIA also includes the marathon with its outdoor T&F championships.

There are many advantages to competing in the NAIA as a race walker. Besides the benefit of the close-knit communities and small class sizes typically found on a NAIA member school campus, NAIA athletics offer:

- 1) A maximum opportunity to participate in regular season competitions and National Championships
- 2) Greater opportunities to transfer without losing a season of eligibility
- 3) Fewer recruiting restrictions and No NCAA Clearing house requirements
- 4) The focus is on education and character development of the student athlete

The NAIA is comprised of almost 300 member institutions, each dedicated to the ideals of excellence in character and respect in both athletics and academics. About 200 of these schools have T&F programs. And of particularly good news to HS race walkers is the fact that only about two dozen of those schools currently have race walkers. The rest are looking for that one walker that will lead their program. This paper identifies many of these schools and the coach's email address. But to obtain a complete listing of all NAIA member colleges click on over to the NAIA's website:

<http://naia.cstv.com/member-services/about/members.htm>

The NAIA recruitment process is less cumbersome, with fewer restrictions on the contact between a student-athlete and a coach. More frequent communication aids in assuring that the student-athlete is comfortable with the choice of an institution. While NAIA rules hold to strict academic requirements, the process of establishing eligibility is streamlined since there is no clearinghouse.

What about National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) schools? Regretfully, the NCAA does not recognize the race walk as a track & field event. Current NCAA rules prohibit student athletes who are race walkers from receiving financial assistance from the athletic departments at their colleges. Therefore there are NO athletic scholarships for race walking within the NCAA ranks. That said, there still exists some opportunities for race walking at certain NCAA universities because of extremely supportive coaches at those institutions. These schools are mainly on the east coast where race walking is historical strong:

NCAA Division I:

None

NCAA Division II:

Mansfield University, Mansfield, PA (Mike Rohl) <mrohl@mnsfld.edu>

NCAA Division III:

U. of Rochester, Rochester, NY (John Izzo) <jizzo@Rochester.edu>

Stockton College, Pomona, NJ (Bill Preston) <prestonw@stockton.edu>

Huntingdon College, Huntingdon, Alabama (Nate Rucker) <nruicker@huntingdon.edu>

New York University, NY City, NY (Nick McDonough) <npm1@nyu.edu>

At lot of the NCAA limitations are also applied per gender. The combined Scholarship Limits for an entire program at the NCAA Division I level in Track & Field/Cross Country athletes are 18 for the women and 12.6 for the men. Race walkers have been ruled ineligible by the NCAA to receive any of these scholarships.

Junior College in California

There is currently one junior college in California where a high school athlete can get the cross country, track & field and race walking opportunities that should be afforded him or her. In 2010 two-time Olympian Tim Seaman was hired as a head Track and cross country coach at Cuyamaca College near San Diego, California. You can contact Coach Seaman at: <Tim.Seaman@Olympian.org>

Current NAIA Race Walking Success Stories

In addition to having the race walk as a scoring event at its indoor and outdoor collegiate national T&F championships, the NAIA encourages its member conferences to include the walks at both invitational meets as well as Conference Championships. The Heart of America Athletic Conference (HAAC) and the Mid-South conferences currently lead the way. Several additional conferences, such as the Mid-Central College Conference (MCC) have added the walk as a demonstration event.

Heart of America Athletic Conference { Baker University (Kan.); Benedictine College (Kan.); Central Methodist University (Mo.); Evangel University (Mo.); Graceland University (Iowa); Lindenwood University (Mo.); MidAmerica Nazarene University (Kan.); Missouri Valley College (Mo.); William Jewell College (Mo.) }

Mid-Central College Conference { Bethel (Ind), Goshen (Ind), Grace College (Ind), Huntington University (Ind), Indiana Wesleyan University (Ind), Spring Arbor University (Mich), Taylor University (Ind), and University of St Francis (Indiana) }.

Mid South Conference { Berea College (Ky); Campbellsville University (Ky.); University of the Cumberlands (Ky.); Georgetown College (Ky.); Lindsey Wilson College (Ky.); Pikeville College (Ky.); St. Catharine College (Ky.); West Virginia University Institute of Technology; University of Rio Grande (Ohio); Shawnee State University (Ohio) }

The following NAIA schools currently have race walkers on campus, or have had an athlete transfer there, or have signed a student athlete to start classes in the fall. Some offer scholarships to race walkers. All are actively recruiting additional race walkers:

1. Ashford College (Iowa) "Tyson Graham" <Tyson.Graham@ashford.edu>
2. Ave Maria University (Florida) "Mike Dewitt" <mike.dewitt@avemaria.edu>
3. Baker University (Kan.) "Zach Kindler" <zach.kindler@bakerU.edu>

2010 NAIA Outdoor Track & Field Championships
Indiana Wesleyan University, Marion, Indiana
 Friday, May 28th, 2010

2010 marks the first year that the women's race was contested at the 5,000m distance. Therefore race winner – Nicola Evangelista – from Canada's British Columbia University (BCU) is the new NAIA record holder for the women's race walk. Both walks were conducted in very hot and humid conditions in 2010. Inaki Gomez repeated as men's champ – outlasting Cedarville's Josh Wiseman.
